

SONSHIP AND SERVANTHOOD IN THE KINGDOM

LAWRENCE K. KIBET

Lawrence Kibet is a pastor and overseer of Christ Dominion Church in Nakuru, Kenya; with over 40 years of experience in leadership and teaching ministry both locally and internationally. He has served numerous churches in various capacities, and; also engaged in teaching, training and administration in Bible Colleges. He has faithfully remained focused on the teaching on sonship over the past 20 years with this book being the results of the growth in the revelation of the Holy Spirit on sons of God. The other book, The Making of Sons covers other perspectives of sons, and would also certainly interest every believer of Jesus Christ. Kibet is also a Professor of Economics at Egerton University with broad experience in research, consultancy and teaching. He has a good management experience as Chair of Economics Department and Dean of Faculty of Commerce. He has also served on various editorial Boards of refereed international journals and widely published other books and journal papers.

A MUST READ

This book clarifies some controversial questions in church ministry. This is a special overflow of apostolic grace to ministers of the gospel. The book uniquely presents the conflict of sonship attitude and servanthood attitude not only in the Church ministry but also in a family and nation. The identity of the sons of God has been clouded in a mix of conflicts of children and servants, and intertwined in a confusion of works, grace, law, and faith. This book, however, clarifies the distinction between sons and servants as applicable in ministry, family, and nation. Apart from some initial perception as being radical or controversial, this book summarizes the entire bible record as a conflict between sons who grow up with the mind of the Son and children who are raised with a servant mindset. This book is not only essential for ministers but also parents, youth, and scholars in theology and religion.
